stays on the North East edge of the field and is marked by several FP signs. At the houses the FP turns left and runs between the gardens and comes out onto Carters Lane, turn right and walk down the lane until it turns right.

Alternatively if wet underfoot stay on the footpath past the high Tudor brick wall, you are now on Old Woking Road. At the end of the wall turn right into Carters Lane. Proceed up Carters Lane for about a mile until the lane turns right at the FP sign.

To visit Woking Palace turn right and continue straight on until you reach a metal gate, pass the gate and walk down the earth track eventually coming to an information board on your right describing the site. Beyond the information board you cross the original drawbridge of the Palace and enter the site. The small stone building with the modern roof probably dates from the time of Lady Margaret Beaufort, the mother of Henry VII. The building is locked except on the 3 Open Weekends. The building to the right may have been a real tennis court and was later used as a farm building. The foundations of the Great Hall can be seen; other foundations have been located but are buried to preserve them. Walk through the copse where you will see three fishponds.

Retrace your steps back through the entrance gate and go up to FP signs as Carters Lane turns left to go back to the main road. By the FP sign turn right and follow the path for approximately 500m keeping the sewage works fencing on your left, as the fencing ends go over the stile and enter a field. Staying on the FP you leave one small field and enter another by crossing a ditch via a small brick bridge. The path then bears left and shortly crosses another ditch again via a small brick bridge. The path now meanders roughly parallel to a row of pylons; continue until you reach a style, cross the style to reach the road, Newark Lane, just as it crosses over the River Wey.

Starting point: Under Old Woking Cross at the mini-roundabout, junction B382 and A247 (Broadmead Road) head east along Old Woking High Street to the junction of Church Street.

To visit St Peters Church: turn right into Church Street and see the many old houses. Return to the High Street and turn right to continue on.

If dry: As the High Street takes a sharp left take the footpath (FP) down the left hand side of The Life Works building, continue past the cemetery gates on the right and follow narrow footpath into the field. The footpath
